A controller deals with a wide range of information so a high level of concentration and a high standard of physical fitness are essential. A controller remembers that lives of thousands of passengers are in his hands. Our job is challenging and stressful. Things can suddenly go wrong in the air so a controller must be able to make quick correct decision and cope with unexpected and stressful situation. There is no room for error.

I enjoy my job because I work in a good team. We never get bored in our job as we have no routine. The good thing about our job is satisfaction that comes from doing a good job.

However, air traffic controllers have to work on public holidays, at weekends and at nights. That is a disadvantage of our job. And the worst thing is when an accident occurs or when a controller experiences the stress of an operational error.

We have good working conditions. We have a comfortable and well-equipped operations room. Our working position is equipped with...
